Project Proposal on: Educational Question-Answer Forum for Bangladesh

Broad Domain

Question-Answer forum is an online social community where any people can ask question and get answer from other people. Educational forum also means a social community which will be specialized for education system. In such a forum any user can create a question about any study topics. Any people can answer to a question. There exists comment system too. People can comment on a question or an answer. Users can also vote to an answer. Users get rating on number votes.

Problem Statement

In Bangladesh there is no well-known educational question-answer forum. Such a forum can help students of Bangladesh of any class or curriculum. Facing problems on study topic is common fact for a student. Educational question-answer forum can help the students to discuss online about their study topic.

Existing works

There exists some global question-answer forum for people of any country. Quora [1] is well known question-answer platform for users of all country, but it doesn't provide proper interface for study related discussion. It provides general purpose discussion within people of the world. Academia, and question-answer forum for educational purpose, but from public tags and questions it can be seen that questions specialized to specific education system of a country is not respected here. [2] However, Academia is not user friendly for Students of Bangladesh to discuss in native approach and language. [3]

What I want to do

I want to create an online educational question-answer forum for the students of all educational level of Bangladesh.

Anyone can be a user to this forum.

User actions are as below:

- A user can ask question on his study topic
- A user can answer to another's question
- A user can comment to another's question or answer
- A user can vote/downvote to an answer or question

Users will gain reputation based on votes on his/her answer or question. Any people can view the most reputed users on the top level in public user list.
